"I have found it incredibly challenging to find an entertaining, challenging and safe camp for my very active son. Thus, it has been a revelation finding the Iverna Gardens day camp. My son looks forward to the activities, loves the teachers and essentially does not want to come home - by far the best option in London."

M., mum of four children

A creative method

The method behind the camps is Montessori-inspired, which means children, although directed by adults, are encouraged to work independently and creatively. Adults show them how to make an item (such as a costume, a delicious treat, a show, a game) and the children decide what it will look, taste or feel like. There are different age groups and all activities are designed to suit different skills. For some projects, the older children act as helpers for the younger ones (little ones tend to learn faster from older peers, and the older ones have the best brought out in them by providing the help)
